Just walking through the market, seeing the boats, the smells the village, allows you to immerse yourself in the real Vietnam, another not to be missed visit.

Fish sales and fresh food to eat

30 May 2017

You need to get here at daybreak as by 7.30-8.00am things will have quietened. The area is very busy with landings and fish auctions before those times. Don't get in the way! There are very few tourists around. I noticed that most of boats are staffed by men but the sales are conducted by women. You may be lucky and see a rare species of fish. The bridge in the background of some photos has long been completed. If, travelling from Hoi An you will cross it.

A nice break from the beach

30 Mar 2017

We took an early morning walk through the fishing village, watching the fish being unloaded and sold at the quayside. Not touristy but great to watch people going about their normal life. A real insight into the Vietnamese life.

Loved the village!

04 Jan 2017

We walked thru out the village, did some shopping from the gracious people, gifts to take home, watched them working on a boat, awesome how they make the boats! Loved the hand make items you could buy in the little shops, chop stick holders, chains carved boxes with inlaid shell. Special people too!

Must do...

28 Oct 2016

So very relaxing and a different diversion. Something different to do other than the beach. Easy and fast.
